Knock on Wood: Poems About Superstitions by Janet S. Wong

knock on wood for luck Cross your fingers too
I really hope you get what you want
I really hope you do Wish on a star
Just north of the moon
In the month of May Good luck and fortune
Will follow you
May be to day
Jump in the rain at night
See the darken sky
Wish on those clouds
That are whizzing past Whizzing way up high Wish on a birthday cake

Knock on Wood - a poem by juliebuck - All Poetry

"Itchy ears, broken mirrors, and hats worn backward join wood spirits, ghosts, and of course black cats in this imaginative exploration of common and lesser-known superstitions. . . . Humor, satire, subplots, historic references, and decorative and surreal elements abound in artful profusion. There is much to ponder in both words and pictures."

Knock on wood, knock on wood If luck had anything to do with us falling in love I would find myself a rabbit's foot, a leprechaun's pot of gold And hold on to them until the end of times Knock on wood, knock on wood If in the desert like Aladdin I found myself an old lamp and a genie inside I would wish for you more than one time

Eddie Floyd - Knock on Wood Lyrics | Genius Lyrics Knocking on wood, also touch wood, is an apotropaic tradition of literally touching, tapping, or knocking on wood, or merely stating that one is doing or intending to do so, in order to avoid "tempting fate" after making a favorable prediction or boast, or a declaration concerning one's own death or another unfavorable situation. In some versions of the tradition, only one person, the speaker, is meant to "knock on wood".

Knocking on wood - Wikipedia
The shapely poems are infused with fey intimations in keeping with the collection's theme: "It is said/salt is magic. The pure kind, sea crystals./Spilled salt is magic flung wild." Some selections are haunting, and some humorous, as in this glimpse of a vampire's downfall: "All you bloodsuckers,/this is your last chance:/I am one bite/away-/from a hunk/of Mother's famous garlic chunk chicken."
